Pest control

Q: Sir, I've spoken with 31st Civil Engineer Squadron entomology about the mosquito population on base and was told that other than placing a chemical tablet in an area of standing water there wasn't much they could do about it.

I was also told they did not have a fog machine and doubted it would do much good anyhow.

CE came out to my shop (Bldg. 1029) to access the problem, but was unable to locate any standing water. They determined the mosquitoes were likely coming from the cornfields around the base.

I've killed at least eight mosquitoes at my desk today, had the union representative in my office complaining and recently, I had to apologize to a VIP touring the facility.

With all the media hype over the West Nile Virus, isn't there something that can be done?

A: Like other Air Force bases overseas, Aviano's Entomology Shop uses many of the same practices as our host nation neighbors.

Because there aren't many areas of standing water in this part of Italy local practice is not to spray wide areas or use fog machines for mosquito control.

In your case we suggest doing the same as our Italian neighbors and use insect repellent in small quantities as necessary.

By the way, we have the same problem in my office.

KUDOS

Operational tour

I would like to thank Capt. Mike McAleenan and Master Sgt. David Jenkins of the 31st Operations Support Squadron weather station for taking time out of their busy work schedule to give my tour of the base's weather station. They both shared their knowledge and excitement about weather forecasting and their careers in the military with my earth science classes.

The students gained favorable impressions of the Air Force weather training program and invaluable insight into the real world of weather forecasting. It is because of people like Captain McAleenan and Master Sgt. Jenkins, that we continue to have young people encouraged to join the military as a career.

I also appreciate the support of the military community in my classroom.

Is it the flu or is it something else?

By Maj. Dennis Fay
31st Aerospace
Medicine Squadron

You don't have to be a medical expert to know that this is the time of year in which the incidence of upper respiratory illnesses is on the rise at Aviano. Just look around at your own shop, family or friends. You also don't need to be a medical expert to understand the number one way to prevent getting sick is by washing your hands.

Viruses live on the hands of infected people and that is the number one way they get transmitted from person to person. It is also how people re-infect themselves before they get completely well. Thorough hand washing means at least 15 seconds with lots of soap and warm water.

Supervisors must establish a policy whereby your people feel trusted to call in sick, or at least send them home if they show up to work sick. I know it sounds crazy, but one of the biggest problems we experience in the military medical system is the old-fashioned idea that everyone must go see the doctor call to keep from working. Sending people in to see the doctor when they are infected with a virus is not a wise use of medical care, inconveniences the sick person and spreads germs. And there isn't a lot we can do to make the person better any way! They need to follow the advice their mom gave them years ago. Stay in bed, drink lots of clear fluids and/or fruit juices, eat some chicken soup (no kidding) and take a fever reducer to treat the symptoms. The body will overcome the virus usually within a week or so. Of course, if you have a high temperature or if symptoms get worse beyond three-four days, that might indicate a bacterial infection and that does require a trip to the clinic.

So what is the flu and the vaccine all about? Here is the best way to differentiate the flu from the common cold.

The flu generally involves body aches and a really run down feeling and is most often accompanied by a fever. The other way to figure out the difference is: if you get a flu shot and then get sick, it isn't the flu! Well, that is generally true unless you were incubating the flu before you got the vaccination.

Influenza (the "flu") can produce serious illness. It spreads when specific viruses pass from infected individuals to the nose and/or throat of others.

Influenza can cause fever, chills, headache, cough, sore throat and muscle aches. It can lead to pneumonia and death in severe cases.

Although influenza can make any individual sick, many people are only affected for a few days, while others develop serious illness and may require hospitalization.

Individuals considered at "high risk" for serious illness resulting from the flu include people 65 years and older, residents of long term care facilities or persons of any age with chronic medical conditions.

Children or adults with long-term health problems are at risk, too. Those conditions include, but are not limited to heart disease, anemia, metabolic diseases (e.g. diabetes), asthma, lung disease and others including kidney disease.

A common misconception among people is that they will get the flu from the vaccination.

But the truth is the materials used to develop the flu shot are processed in such a way that you cannot develop influenza from the vaccine medium.

To get your flu shot, stop by the immunizations clinic in Area One from 7:30-11:30 a.m. and 1-4:30 p.m. Monday-Friday. You don't need to bring in your yellow shot record, but it is highly encouraged.

For other sites/times, call public health at Ext. 5242.

First heroes of war on terror wore no uniforms

By Staff Sgt. Marc Barnes
18th Wing Public Affairs

KADENA AIR BASE, Japan (AFPN) — Every tragedy in America's history has had its share of heroes. Many of these heroes have been airmen, soldiers, sailors and Marines.

Many of today's bear the title of "firefighter" or "policeman." But perhaps the greatest heroes of all were simply called "American citizens."

Heroes in uniform are in abundance following the terrorist attacks in New York and Washington, but it appears the first heroes of our war on terrorism were simply American citizens who were fueled by love for their country and their fellow man.

As news reporters in the United States continue to dig to find every single detail about events leading up to, during and after the terrorist attacks in New York and Washington, they have uncovered many stories of American heroism.

The one I find most touching is the tale behind the crash of hijacked United Airlines Flight 93 in western Pennsylvania.

According to these stories, it is becoming more and more apparent that a few passengers aboard that flight were willing to — and did — sacrifice their lives to save the lives of fellow citizens.

The names that have circulated in various news reports are Jeremy Glick, Tom Burnett, Todd Beamer, Mark Bingham and Lou Nacke.

It is quite likely that others were also involved, but phone calls by these men to family members before the crash confirm they played a vital role.

These five didn't wear uniforms — they were businessmen. They hadn't felt the call to sign on the line and serve their country.

But when their country needed them, they stepped up, and they and their families paid a heavy price.

America is already relying heavily on some of its uniformed heroes — the civil servants who continue the search for thousands who are still missing.

In addition, America has called on its other uniformed heroes to respond to the terrorists who killed our fellow citizens, and servicemembers are answering that call, both in the U.S. and overseas.

While civil servants and servicemembers respond, I have to say thanks to Jeremy, Tom, Todd, Mark, Lou and the other unnamed heroes of Flight 93.

Our president and our nation will see to it that the cowards who took your lives are brought to justice.

You are my heroes — a perfect example of the spirit of America.

You will not be forgotten

IN BRIEF

Credit Union

The Global Credit Union has changed telephone numbers. The new credit union telephone number is Ext. 7697.

The postal Christmas annex is asking people to pick up package mail as soon as notification slips are received. The facility is overstocked which slows down processing of incoming mail.

An American Red Cross babysitting training class is 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., today in Bldg. 118. The purpose of the course is to provide individuals, ages 11 to 15, the information and skills necessary to provide safe and responsible care for children in the absence of parents or adult guardians.

The course cost is $20 which includes the text book.

Interested individuals must pay and sign up in advance at the Red Cross Office in Bldg. 118. For more information, call Ext. 5576.

The housing office closes at 2 p.m., Tuesday for a local national commanders call; at 1 p.m., Dec. 21 for an office function; all day Dec. 24, 25 and 26 for Christmas holidays and Dec. 31 and Jan. 1 for the New Year's holiday.

Aviano Girl Scouts will be selling calendars through Dec. 14 at the BX.

The Spouse's Benvenuti Sacile Christmas market is 5-9 p.m., Tuesday. The family support relocation center is sponsoring this event.

This free trip also includes a stop at a local cafe to sample some traditional Italian seasonal treats. To sign up or for more information, call Ext. 5661.

Sibling preparation class is 7:30 p.m., Dec. 18 at Sacile Hospital in the fourth floor conference room.

For more information, call Ext. 5667.

The post offices need postal patrons to pick up mail as soon as possible. They also need volunteers to help move the mail.

There will be a rush of mail during the Christmas season.

For more information, call Ext. 5725.

Moms, pops and tots playgroup meets 10 to 11 a.m., Wednesdays. This group is for parents and children 15 months to 5 years old. For more information, call Ext. 5667.

First Term Airmen Course is looking for a team leader. Applicants must demonstrate excellent dress and appearance, military bearing and communication skills. They must be dedicated to mentoring, demonstrate core values, and serve as a positive role model. An applicant must be a senior airman (ALS graduate) or a staff sergeant.

This person is in a unique position to prepare new airmen for life in the Air Force. The deadline to submit applications is Dec. 20. For more information, call Tech. Sgt. Gary Leist at Ext. 5402.

A stress reduction class is available 2-4 p.m., Tuesday at the health and wellness center. For more information, call Ext. 5667.

Many areas have mirrors posted outside blind spots. These mirrors allow motorists to see oncoming traffic while remaining in a safe zone. Use the mirrors wisely. Remember that objects are closer than they appear. Motorists may have pulled out and forgotten to turn lights on, especially in the early morning. Always look left and right before pulling out.

The exercise will be broken into three phases. "The first phase is the initial or set up phase. This is where we take the equipment out to the site and set up," Becker said. "Once we set up, we will have field training which is the second phase. This involves such things as self aid and buddy care, and chem. warfare. The third and final stage will involve different field scenarios, such as defending the base from aggressors and having to operate our field equipment at different MOPP-levels. At some point during the exercise, we'll have the families of the members come out to the site. The families will see the husbands or wives in garrison and off-duty, and I feel it's important that they get a chance to see them in the field doing what they would do if they were deployed."

According to Senior Master Sgt. Christi Hayburn, superintendent for C4I systems flight, planning for the four-day exercise took one month, and the 200-plus Scorpions worked many hours to get everything ready to go to the site.

"In the past, we may have sent out 25 vehicles for an exercise," Hayburn said. "For Scorpion Strike 01-02, we sent out more than 50 from various fuel trucks and power generators to palletized vehicles. Also, we pride ourselves on getting equipment out by truck or by train and in this exercise, we are simulating flying to the base."

Hayburn also added that the entire squadron performs the tasks necessary for the exercise – without the help of augmentees.

"We want to be able to know we can get the job done ourselves if necessary," Hayburn said. "Once we know that, then we will know what we can do and what we may need help with."

Hayburn also said this is an official TDY – even though everyone is only 20 minutes from the base. "We had to cut orders, so the members will received per diem for the time they are out there," Hayburn said.

Although the Scorpions have deployed to Denmark, as well as had an exercise in September to prepare for this exercise, the commander said there will still be challenges with this exercise.

"Classroom preparation can only take a military member so far," Becker said. "Exercises such as this will help us learn how to adapt to weather conditions, as well as tell us okay we need more practice and training in."

Becker also added this exercise is in preparation for the upcoming wing Operational Readiness Exercise in 2002.

The 603rd ACS will participate in Scorpion Strike through Sunday.

SECAF shares views on space road map

By Hap Parker

Space and Missile Systems Center Public Affairs

LOS ANGELES AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AFP) — Air Force Secretary Dr. James G. Roche has spelled out what he sees as the new space road map — the integration of air and space.

Roche was in Los Angeles recently and addressed military and industry partners at the Air Force Association National Symposium.

"Since I became secretary of the Air Force almost six months ago, I've spent a lot of time on the road, meeting many people across the Air Force, industry and our communities," he said. "But wherever I go, I've engaged with folks about how we intend to shape our Air Force so it is poised for the current century."

Roche briefly commented on the situation in Afghanistan and said that America is united in a war for liberty and "for all of the same freedoms and values that mark our manner of life.

"It seems to me, as we look at space and the future of the Air Force, our performance in the space arena will prove to be a key indicator of how well the Air Force as a whole will fulfill our responsibilities for the 21st century," he said.

With that in mind, Roche singled out four general categories he will focus on: strategy, people, efficiency and the industrial base.

He said his first priority is to work with his colleagues to adjust strategic parameters to fit the challenges and opportunities of a new security environment.

Then, as part of the overall imperative to attract and retain the best people in a high-technology world, he will accelerate efforts to develop a space cadre for the Air Force.

Roche said his third priority is to recognize how the Air Force must be efficient and cost-effective, in part by looking to best business practices and processes in acquisition programs and operations.

"Finally," Roche said, "there is the critical need our nation faces to provide more incentive in industry for innovation.

"If we can begin to solve these issues in the space domain, we will be well on our way to completing the transformation of the Air Force we began years ago, and which our president and (Defense) Secretary (Donald) Rumsfeld have envisioned for the future," he said.

Area One Liberator Road traffic flow changes

The traffic direction on Liberator Road has been reversed to allow the post office parking lot to remain open during the construction work in the area.

The work is estimated to take several weeks. Look for sign changes in this area before proceeding.

Through traffic is allowed past the library and around Sabre Hall to gain access to the chapel and child development center area, but it is not allowed on the road behind Sabre Hall to the bowling center. Follow posted signs at all times!

For more information on construction activities and weekly updates, visit the Aviano 2000 website on the Aviano intranet at <http://16af-intranet.aviano.af.mil/av2k/> and click on the traffic and parking advisory link.

Christmas annex stores, mails holiday packages

By Airman 1st Class
Ebony Nichols
Co-editor

With Christmas approaching, more people are sending and receiving packages. Many people are finding yellow or pink package pick-up slips, in their mailboxes, with a stamp reading, "Pick up at Bldg. 1469, the Christmas annex." Normally, packages could be picked up at the post office, but there are so many during the holiday seasons that the facilities do not have adequate space.

According to Master Sgt. Dale McLeod, Aviano postmaster, there is more space in the annex than in the two post offices. However, if the shelves ever fill up, the annex workers would use the floor space to store packages.

"During the Christmas holiday season, the flightline and Area One post offices receive more packages than the facilities are designed to hold," said McLeod. "So, instead of trying to use the annex to hold the overflow of packages, we try to use the annex for all incoming packages during the Christmas season." According to McLeod, the annex has been in use for the past four holiday seasons.

In addition to the two pick-up windows, there are also two finance clerks set-up at the annex to assist customers with mailing outgoing packages. The final day for customers to mail outgoing packages from the annex is Dec. 22. The post offices will continue to mail outgoing packages.

Customers are asked to pick up packages as soon as possible, since there is a limited amount of shelf-space. "If packages are not picked up immediately, a second notice will be made after five days," said McLeod.

Airman 1st Class Ebony Nichols

"If a package is still on the shelf 10 days after the second notice, we have to determine whether to keep it or send the package back to the sender," said McLeod.

The annex is located between the credit union and the contingency dormitory. Some customers feel that the annex and its location are a convenience for some while others see it as an inconvenience.

"It is somewhat of an inconvenience to come to a separate building to pick up packages, but it's a nice building," said Lorraine Davis.

"We know traveling to a separate facility to retrieve packages is a hassle, but there isn't enough space within the post offices," said McLeod.

"It is convenient for me, because the annex is closer to my job, bigger than the post office, there is plenty of parking and the lines are shorter," said Tech. Sgt. Cindie Kibler, Det. 3, 721st Air Mobility Operations Group.

The postal finance (mailing outgoing packages) is open 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Mondays through Fridays and 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., Saturdays. Package pick-up windows are open 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., Mondays through Fridays and 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., Saturdays. Beginning Saturday, the pick-up windows' operating hours will extend to 8 p.m., Mondays through Fridays. "We receive the highest customer flow during lunch and after 4 p.m.," said McLeod.

Sometimes, there is quite a rush of customers and packages, and the annex could use help from volunteers. To volunteer at the annex, call Tech. Sgt. Urbito Abuyen or Staff Sgt. Michael Reimers at Ext. 7947 or 7966.

New DoD staffing process for permanent civilian employees

By Gloria Padilla

Aviano Civilian Personnel Office

On Dec. 14, the Air Force will release a new job kit. Under the requirements of this new kit, everyone is required to submit a resume prior to self-nominating for all internal vacancy announcements.

All properly submitted resumes will be on file for a one-year period. Applicants may update resumes within the one-year period if necessary.

However, upon expiration of the resume, applicants must submit a fresh resume for further consideration.

You may submit your resume using one of three methods after Feb. 15, 2002:

- The On-line Resume Writer at <http://www.afpc.randolph.af.mil/afjobs>

- Send a text copy of your resume and supplemental data to Internal Employees - Int.Resume@afpc.randolph.af.mil;

- Send a copy of resume and supplemental data to HQ AFPC/DPCTDC, Attn: Recruitment Call Center, 550 C Street West Suite 57, Randolph AFB, TX 78150-4759.

All permanent AF civilian employees must complete the following steps to be considered for positions including Aviano: submit a resume, review job announcements, and self-nominate.

For more information, call Ext. 7307.

C-17 Globemaster III sets thirteen world records

By 2nd Lt. Katharine Schutlz
418th Flight Test Squadron

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif.

(AFP) — Looking to demonstrate the capabilities of the Air Force's newest cargo aircraft, a C-17A Globemaster III crew broke a number of altitude and payload world records Nov. 27.

A crew from the 418th Flight Test Squadron set 13 aviation world records on the mission, bringing the total of C-17 world records to 33.

"These records highlight the capabilities of the C-17, which is providing crucial airlift support to our country's worldwide operations," said Capt. Chris Morgan, mission commander on one of the historic flights. "It was not an extraordinary effort, with the exception that we flew to within a few knots of the stall speed, something an operational crew would not normally do."

The crew flew three sorties to set maximum altitude records for payloads ranging from no payload to 88,200 pounds. Maximum altitudes were achieved by first burning down to the minimum fuel required to return to base and land and then climbing the aircraft as high as possible.

An observer from the National Aeronautic Association, the governing body for U.S. record attempts, was on board for all three sorties to verify the records.

One altitude record set was for steady horizontal flight, in which the aircraft had to maintain a constant airspeed and altitude for at least 90 seconds. The aircraft maintained an unofficial level altitude of 44,430 feet with a 22,100-pound payload. Altitudes of 43,820 and 45,500 feet were also reached carrying payloads of 88,200 and 22,100 pounds respectively.

The aircraft was ready to keep going, said Maj. Chris Lindell, one of the test pilots.

"The maximum altitude achieved for the lower weights attempted was 45,500 feet, which was based on an operating restriction for the engines," he said. "The aircraft could have gone higher."

Nov. 26, the NAA representative monitored the official weighing of the aircraft. The payload used to reach the required weights consisted of large blocks of concrete chained to pallets. The C-17 loadmasters, weight and balance hangar staff and airdrop shop people worked together to ensure the loads and placement in the aircraft were optimized for the flight.

"This effort took a great deal of coordination among multiple Team Edwards organizations," said Maj. Mark Foringer, C-17 test team director. "Overall, it was a huge success."

In addition to Lindell and Morgan, the record-setting crew was comprised of test pilots Maj. Todd Markwald and Boeing Co.'s

Norm Howell along with loadmasters Tech. Sgt. Tom Fields and Boeing's Gary Briscoe.

The Federation Aeronautique Internationale, or FAI, is the official record keeper for all aviation and space world records and oversees national aviation organizations of all member countries. World-class records are defined as the best international performances for specific classes and categories recognized by the FAI. The C-17 records were set in the category designated for landplanes with jet engines and a takeoff gross weight between 330,693 and 440,924 pounds.

Allotment program benefits enlisted widows

By Cathy Landroche

Air Force Enlisted Foundation

SHALIMAR, Fla. (AFP) — A retiree

allotment program has been developed to help raise money for an assisted living facility for residents of Teresa Village in Fort Walton Beach, Fla., and at Bob Hope Village in Shalimar, Fla.

For more than 26 years, the Air Force Enlisted Foundation has been offering housing and financial assistance to widows of retired enlisted Air Force members at Teresa Village and for 16 years at Bob Hope Village.

The nonprofit agency was formerly known as the Air Force Enlisted Men's Widows and Dependents Home Foundation and the Air Force Enlisted Widows Home Foundation. It is the only facility of its kind for surviving spouses of retired enlisted military people. Currently there are 440 residents with 625 on the waiting list. The foundation's goal for several years has been to build an assisted living facility for the residents.

Both villages are independent living facilities and the capability for medical care does not exist. Therefore, when residents have requirements that make independent living impractical or hazardous, they are forced to leave their homes and friends at a time when they need help the most.

An assisted living facility provides as much independence as possible for a resident, but with supervision, assistance and health-care services available as needed.

In the past eight years, only $2 million of the needed $20 million has been raised toward the foundation's goal. State, federal, Medicare and Medicaid funding can not be used toward constructing this facility. Air Force Assistance Fund donations can only be used for indigent widow rent subsidy. To help in raising the necessary funds, a retiree allotment program has been developed.

The idea was the brainchild of former Chief Master Sergeant of the Air Force Jim Binnicker, Air Force Enlisted Foundation president and chief executive officer. He envisioned a program where military retiree support for the AFEF could come through payroll deduction.

"We all grew up in the Air Force participating in charities using the allotment program," said the retired chief master sergeant of the Air Force. "It was painless — didn't see it — didn't miss it," he said of the dollars taken out monthly.

The task for implementing the program went to retired Chief Master Sgt. Ken Hair, marketing director. Hair worked for nearly a year getting approval from the Defense Accounting and Finance Service in Denver, and coordinating with DFAS in Cleveland, to ensure the agency was ready to receive and process the allotments.

"Our test program began in April 2001, with just a few friends of the foundation," said Hair. "It worked unbelievably well. In fact, it worked so well, we were excited about expanding it as soon as possible."

Letters to more contacts went out and the allotment form was published in the August 2001 newsletter, along with a letter from Binnicker explaining the program.

"So far, we have 160 participants and there hasn't been a single glitch or disruption in anyone's pay," said Hair. "People have called me and are impressed with how smoothly it's working. So we hope to expand it to a large percentage of our retired military members."

The allotment program will allow the foundation to move forward much faster in achieving its goal of life care, said Binnicker.

Future plans also call for a four-story mid-rise with 80, two-bedroom, two-bath apartments. Retired Chief Master Sgt. John Wright from San Antonio was one of the charter participants.

"I saw Jim Binnicker at an Air Force Association convention last year and told him I thought it would be a great idea if the foundation could do an allotment program for retirees just like we had when we were on active duty," Wright said. "He said they were working it and he'd love for me to participate."

"I've been involved for more than six months now," he said. "I'd recommend it for anyone. It's the most inexpensive and least tedious way to give."

"There are many ways for people to give: personal bequests, bank drafts (for civilians), bequests and annuities," he said. "But so far, the allotment program is easiest because it comes right out of a person's pay."

To make it more convenient for people, the foundation inserted a copy of Department of Defense Form 2558, Authorization to Start, Stop or Change an Allotment, in its last two newsletters. The forms are preset with the appropriate account number, and all people have to do is fill in their name, address, dollar amount, etc., and fax the form back to the foundation at (850) 651-4461.

People can also visit their local accounting and finance office or contact the foundation toll-free at (800) 258-1413 for a copy of the form.

In Brief

Due to the construction of the new NATO hospital, parking at the 31st Medical Group is limited. Patient parking is available in front of the clinic; however, the gravel parking lots have been closed. Additional parking is located behind the chapel. Please allow for additional time due to the limited parking.

The Aviano Officers Spouses Club presents Befana's Vendor Showcase Saturday and Sunday with more vendors from around the world. To volunteer, call 0434-441301.

Several people from the 555th Fighter Squadron, along with other support personnel from the 31st Fighter Wing returned to Aviano Saturday just in time for the holidays.

About 60 flying and support personnel came back from Operation Northern Watch at Incirlik Air Base, Turkey where they were patrolling the northern no fly zone over Iraq. The 555th FS arrived in Turkey in mid-August replacing the 510th Fighter Squadron.

The remaining deployed people are scheduled to return to Aviano this month.

New Connections is a great way for newly arrived spouses to meet and gain helpful hints on developing friendships, having fun and feeling involved at Aviano. The first class is 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Dec. 20 at the community center.

Those requiring child care who arrived within 60 days prior to this event and are married to an E-5 or below, should call Ext. 5661 regarding possible free child care. For more information, call Ext. 5667.

Education

The deadline to apply for spouse tuition assistance is Dec. 14. Applications are available at the education center. For more information, call Ext. 5365 or 5351.

The University of Maryland offers a literature of the Balkans class Saturday and Sunday.

The University of Maryland University College Field site is offering a two-day course in computer security. Hands-on practice is used to apply the principles of computer security given in the lecture. The course is Dec. 15 and 16.

Effective in January, students will be required to pay for their tuition costs in full at the time of registration. This will be the only means of reserving a place in a course.

Study renaissance art in Florence. While staying in the heart of this medieval city, students will have an opportunity to explore the artistic, historical and cultural milieu into which renaissance art was born. Museum visits within the city and field trips to Sienna, San Gimignano and Arezzo are the integral part of the course. For more information, stop by the UMUC or visit the website at www.ed.umuc.edu.

Embry-Riddle University offers an Aeronautical electronics class in January in the propulsion conference room in Hangar Two. Also offered is an aircraft avionics class in February.

Registration for these classes begins Monday and are open to all career fields. For more information, call Ext. 5140. Ask about the FCC licensing.

City Colleges of Chicago offers courses that are taught via video, Internet, e-mail or CD-ROM. For more information, call Ext. 5143 or e-mail www.ccc-e.org.

Safety tips for hitting the slopes this season

Ski season opens Saturday, so take a moment to think about ski safety.

Some skiers plan to be on the slopes of Cortina by 9:30 a.m., Saturday, making their way down the newly covered slopes of the Cortina d'Ampezzo ski arena. Lets warm up with a few statistics:

1) Knee sprains account for 22 percent of all skiing injuries; for snowboarders, the wrist is the most common injury.

2) 70 percent of all ski-related head injuries are from males ages 15-30.

3) 85 percent of all ski lift accidents occur while the individual is loading or unloading.

4) Young men account for the overwhelming majority of skier deaths.

5) Striking an object (mostly trees) was the leading cause of death.

6) Most deaths occurred in the afternoon, due to the glare from the sun off the snow.

Now, let's talk about some safety tips. Here is a great site to get some basic info: <http://www.snowsafte.org.au/>

1) Gear. Proper preparation is the key to having a great time.

Ensure you have the following:

Waterproof jacket, pants and especially gloves; - water-resistant is okay.

Hat - most of the body's core heat is lost through the head. Keep your hat on while outside.

Goggles - protects the eyes from incoming objects and cuts down on the glare from the snow/sun.

Some optional equipment that's recommended:

Helmet - you may look like a dork, but at least we'll be able to laugh at you in the car, instead of in an ambulance.

Wrist guards - not a bad idea for new snowboarders; skiers tend to put hands out a lot in the beginning

2) Stretch, stretch, stretch - Take some extra time before getting on the lift to stretch out and warm up muscles. Extra flexibility cuts down on injuries.

3) Fluids - drink plenty of nonalcoholic drinks and eat a healthy breakfast and lunch. This gives energy to the body to maintain your core temperature.

4) Don't go beyond your limit - everyone knows what his/her capabilities, don't go further than that. Control the speed.

5) Follow the skier's code:

- People ahead have the right of way. Avoid them.

- Observe posted signs.

- When entering a slope from the side, uphill skiers have the right of way.

- Don't stop and obstruct the trail, move to the side.

- Do not get out of control

6) Hypothermia - indications are stumbling, shivering, slurred speech, and pale skin that is cold to the touch.

Stop and seek warm shelter. Keep warm, put dry clothes on (preferably waterproof if outside). Eat easily digestible, warm food and drink nonalcoholic beverages.

7) Cross skis - If injured or involved in an accident and need assistance stick skis into the snow. This is the international sign recognizable anywhere in the world.

That's a lot. But safety is not always easy or short. Take the extra time now and don't miss out on the rest of the season later. Information courtesy of Tech. Sgt. Gary Leist, 21st Mission Support Squadron safety manager.

AF continues informal muscle-fitness testing

BOLLING AIR FORCE BASE, D.C. (AFPN) — Air Force people will continue muscle-fitness testing, push-ups and crunches on an informal, pass/fail basis beyond Jan. 1, the Air Force Surgeon General announced.

"The extra change in an already turbulent time for our Air Force was a bridge too far," said Lt. Gen. Paul K. Carlton Jr., the Air Force Surgeon General.

"We will continue to test as we have, delay any mandatory enforcement until our turbulence settles down, and then re-address.

"The fitness test has been discussed at some length for the entire test period," Carlton said. "We felt the Air Force was not yet ready to take on more change at this time."

Physical fitness is a readiness issue and directly related to the Air Force's ability to meet its global mission, said Col. Deneice Van Hook, chief of the operational prevention division of the Air Force Medical Operations Agency in the office of the Air Force Surgeon General.

"This temporary delay is only related to how the Air Force assesses the fitness of its people and in no way reduces the need for Air Force people to maintain an appropriate level of fitness," Van Hook said.

All Air Force people must maintain an appropriate fitness level that allows them to perform their duties anywhere and anytime, Van Hook said.

Muscle-fitness testing, push-ups and crunches will complement cycle ergometry testing, which is the best indicator for overall fitness, Van Hook said.
